

TELECOMMUNICATIONS

HIGH-TECH CONNECTIONS

Barnes & Thornburg's skilled attorneys have the experience to help companies handle the complex legal issues surrounding the telecommunications industry. The telecommunications space is ever-evolving – new and emerging technologies, rapidly expanding services (or in some cases, the consolidation of services), and stringent and ever-evolving regulatory frameworks are just a few of the opportunities and challenges our clients face.

Cable, telephone, wireless, satellite and Wi-Fi technologies are changing the telecom landscape. The laws are attempting to keep up with the rapid changes. Our team tirelessly works with clients to identify strategic objectives for transactions, mergers and acquisitions, and advises on solutions to regulatory challenges and contract disputes.

Our telecom clients include carriers, broadcast station owners, satellite communications systems, internet service providers and content distributors, wireless and optical equipment providers, and other organizations who operate in the internet, telecommunications, and media sectors.

Our attorneys have a comprehensive understanding of the global telecom industry and the interplay of U.S. origin technology and equipment in element monitoring systems, network optimization, and core networks – in particular as they relate to compliance with U.S. export law. Our keen industry knowledge – blended with our group's background in technology, IT, media and entertainment, and data security – enables us to tackle a wide scope of complex issues and provide meaningful advice to our clients.

Our goal is to establish sustainable alliances with our clients, resulting in aligned business objectives and mutual investment. We keep an eye on
