David Spooner of the Washington, D.C., office spoke at the nation's largest apparel show in Las Vegas on the Trump administration's trade policy on Feb. 21. The venue was filled to capacity and the show had to turn people away, though we're sure this had far more to do with the new administration's trade policy than with David. He also spoke about the new administration's trade policy at the Fashion Industry Association's annual event for West Coast-based fashion brands at Levi Strauss' headquarters in San Francisco.
