Managing security and privacy risks of students, faculty, and staff has become increasingly important as superintendents determine how to handle going back to school this fall. As new tools are available, security and privacy concerns become an increasing factor in managing risk. Join Barnes & Thornburg attorneys Jason Bernstein and Adam Gajadharsingh for their second webinar in this series where they will:

- Provide strategies for negotiating agreements with vendors to minimize risk and liability
- Outline privacy policies and procedures and efficient ways to get parents' consent

- Provide practical tips in responding to data security incidents and ransomware attacks, including communicating with parents, the board, and the public

If you missed Part 1 of this webinar, you can watch it here. Please note that you must register to watch this recording.

You may ask questions during the Q&A or submit them when you register.
