As companies look to restart their operations as various stay-at-home and shelter-in-place orders expire or are eased in the coming weeks, unionized employers need to be mindful of the various labor law issues that may come into play.

Three seasoned partners from Barnes & Thornburg's Labor and Employment Department will address hot-button union issues you need to think about and be prepared for as workforces come back. From bargaining obligations to requests for information to contract administration in an unprecedented time, we'll cover what you need to know.
