In just a month or so, on Jan. 1, 2020, the California Consumer Privacy Act (CCPA) will go into effect changing not only the data protection legislative landscape in California, but also affecting countless companies located in and outside of the fifth largest economy in the world. Arguably the most comprehensive consumer privacy legislation in U.S. history, the CCPA will create substantial new consumers' rights regarding their personal information and impose various data protection responsibilities on businesses.

As the effective date quickly approaches, sign up for the last episode in the series offered in 2019 and learn about the recent developments, amendments and, particularly, the proposed implementation regulations released on October 10 by California Attorney General Xavier Becerra and the impact they might have on your organization.
