While the use of AI raises eyebrows in many fields, the use of the technology in life sciences has found a much warmer reception.

Whether used to speed drug discovery and clinical trials or applied to immense data sets for diagnostics, AI is helping to quickly move technologies to patients.

Please join us as we explore some of the leading edge applications for AI in life sciences, discuss what needs to change to help bring these technologies forward, and seek to understand the skills needed to integrate this powerful tool into healthcare.

The event will feature a Q&A session. You may ask questions during the Q&A or submit them when you register.
