

Roya Rahmanpour's practice focuses on intellectual property and complex business litigation. She is also skilled in commercial litigation involving business torts, unfair competition and contractual disputes, and has represented companies and individuals in the entertainment, telecommunications, technology, alcohol and beverage, medical device and pharmaceutical industries, among others.

Roya Rahmanpour is a zealous litigator who focuses her practice on trademark, copyright, patent, trade secret and entertainment law, as well as commercial litigation. Roya is skilled in virtually all phases of case development, ranging from pre-litigation strategy, discovery, and motion practice to expert discovery, hearings and trial.

As a dedicated attorney ready to meet any challenge, Roya delivers hands-on advocacy and has advocated client positions in court and in mediation. Clients appreciate Roya's problem solving capabilities, thoughtful analysis and commitment to resolving litigation with their specific financial goals, operational concerns and reputational objectives in mind.

Roya understands the impact a legal dispute may have on her client's bottom line and market position. She tirelessly seeks to advance her clients' goals and interests to obtain favorable results.

While in law school, Roya worked as an extern for the Honorable Valerie Baker Fairbank in the Central District of California.

She also has served as pro bono counsel undertaking all phases of litigation for an elderly Los Angeles resident.
