

Phil Faccenda advises on the full array of municipal finance and corporate transactions. Clients and colleagues alike appreciate Phil's dedication to their legal needs, conscientious responsiveness and resolute focus on client goals.

Phil regularly counsels and assists clients in financing transactions and general corporate matters. He also serves as bond counsel in a variety of taxable and tax-exempt financings, including transactions for local government capital projects, non-profit facilities, school corporation capital projects, economic development and redevelopment projects, and manufacturing facilities. In addition, he has acted as counsel to underwriters in similar types of financings, as well as represented governmental units and for-profit and not-for-profit entities in economic development and related public/private projects.

Principled, easy to work with and affable, Phil is a counselor who cares deeply about the clients he serves and the quality of work he produces. As municipal finance is among the most complex and specialized disciplines in the law, Phil's intelligence, coupled with his natural people skills in negotiating and closing such transactions, is a value-add to those he serves.
