Christopher H. Yetka, a partner in the Minneapolis office of Barnes & Thornburg, authored an article that was featured in the Fall 2014 issue of The Brief, a publication of the American Bar Association. The article, “Insurance Coverage for Punitive Damages,” surveys the various states’ laws on coverage for punitive damages and addresses issues to consider that may affect whether coverage is found under a policy. Specifically, the choice of law analysis that is applied by a state could make a difference on whether a court will allow or deny coverage for what can be very significant damages.
