While many association professionals may be familiar with the employment provisions required by the ADA (Title I), many are not as familiar with the provisions impacting places of public accommodations (Title III) that affect hotels, convention centers, and groups hosting meetings and events in such places. Is compliance the facility's responsibility, the group's or both?

Join Paula Goedert, chair of the Associations and Foundations practice group, as she moderates this lively and informative webinar presented by Barbara Dunn and Matt Misichko. Topics to be discussed include:

- What food allergies, if any, fall under ADA and how to comply in a cost-effective manner
- Assistance for those with "service animals"
- Creating special accommodations for individuals in a certification and testing environment
- The required design features of your meeting room, exhibits or
