

Can We Have Your Attention, Please? The 2013 ABA Journal Blawg 100 List

August 5, 2013 | Labor And Employment

negaphone

You'll have to excuse us as we go a bit off script for a moment.

Once a year, the ABA Journal publishes a list of the 100 best legal blogs. This year, the call for nominations is due no later than Aug. 9, 2013. We aren't one to brag, but think we've carved a nice little niche in the labor blog world and wouldn't argue with the editors of the ABA Journal if BT Labor Relations made this year's list.

Having said that, there's a catch: We aren't allowed to nominate ourselves for this year's list. Bummer.

Fortunately, that's where our readers come in.

The ABA Journal encourages readers (that's you) to submit Blawg 100 amici on behalf of the legal blog that they think deserves to be nominated to the 2013 Blawg 100 list. We aren't shy, so we'll just come out and say it. If you think that we're worthy (and we hope that you do), please fill out this short questionnaire/nomination form in support of BT Labor Relations. The form shouldn't take more than five minutes to fill out, and we promise to thank you in our acceptance speech should we make the top-100.*

We here at BT Labor Relations hope that you enjoy our weekly updates on the latest happenings in labor law. From Right to Work legislation to President Obama's NLRB appointments, it's been a busy year. All of us who contribute to the blog are grateful to our regular readers. After all, you're the reason we blog.

Assuming that we're allowed to give an acceptance speech, which, if we're being honest, probably isn't the case.*

Additional resources:

ABA Blawg 100 Amici

ABA Blawg 100 Amici FAQs

RELATED PRACTICE AREAS

Labor and Employment

Labor Relations