

Kevin Collins represents creditors and other interested parties in Chapter 11 bankruptcy cases and related adversary proceedings in Delaware and various other jurisdictions throughout the United States. Kevin is dedicated to serving as a strategic legal adviser, an organized, efficient and responsive service provider, and an active listener who seeks to understand each client's needs.

Kevin's clients have included trade creditors, lien claimants, asset purchasers, landlords, utilities, lenders, trustees, preference and fraudulent transfer defendants, and other interested parties in bankruptcy reorganization and liquidation proceedings. He has participated in many large and complex commercial restructurings across a broad array of industries, including retail, healthcare, manufacturing and energy, both in Delaware and across the country.

Kevin also renders opinions on enforceability, substantive non-consolidation, true sale and other creditors' rights matters.

Kevin understands, from years of hands-on experience, that every debtor is unique. As a result, he is often called upon to resolve issues ranging from landlord/tenant matters and tax problems to contractual and employment issues, among many others. Regardless of the challenge or complexity of the matter at hand, Kevin makes a point of understanding what his client wants to achieve, as well as the details and overarching goals of the case at hand. Kevin strives to work collaboratively with Delaware attorneys and with opposing counsel to obtain a desirable and cost-effective resolution of his client's legal concerns.

While in law school, Kevin served as a legal extern for the Honorable Judge Kent A. Jordan of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.
