Please join speakers from Barnes & Thornburg and NewFields for an informative webinar on current environmental justice issues.

Environmental justice is a key focus of the Biden administration, resulting in a number of new policies, more resources and renewed momentum for the program. What effect will this increased focus on environmental justice have on litigation, transactions, enforcement and the management of properties located in environmental justice areas?

This webinar will explore the history of environmental justice, the details of new EPA policies, and the effect environmental justice concerns may have on these related legal issues. The webinar will also offer an overview of the proliferating new data tools that can be used to evaluate potential concerns and how to analyze and interpret this data.

1.0 hour CLE credit pending.
