This webinar will provide an overview of hot topics concerning supply chain due diligence and international trade compliance challenges.

These days, all supply chains are global. Failure to anticipate U.S. regulatory requirements can lead to costly delivery delays and even seizures of merchandise. Learn about the U.S. Customs laws, U.S. export control regulations, sanctions, and other U.S. regulations that can have a significant impact on your supply chain.

Persons who would benefit from this webinar, include, but are not limited to, business executives, contracting specialists/administrators, project managers, purchasing specialists, import and export compliance officers, logistics personnel, and legal and financial advisors. With this knowledge, you will be better equipped to employ due diligence and spot or identify potential supply chain and international trade compliance risks.

Learning Objectives

- Brief overview of various import laws and regulations including the Uyghur Forced Labor Prevention Act (UFLPA) and other forced labor laws, trade remedies, special tariffs
- Brief overview of export control and sanctions laws and regulations including those aimed at Russia and China, anti-boycott, and the Securing the Information and Communications Technology and Services Supply Chain Executive Order
- Compliance practices and tools for diving deeper into supply chain due diligence and mitigating risks

The webinar will conclude with a 15-minute Q&A session to address any questions.
