

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Far And Wide

Barnes & Thornburg's International Trade attorneys combine years of hands-on legal know-how with high-level political experience to provide corporations, organizations and foreign sovereign clients with a comprehensive menu of trade services.

We advise clients on trade litigation, export and import regulatory compliance, international trade legislation, World Trade Organization (WTO) matters, free trade agreements, and other matters related to the cross-border movement of goods, services, technology, personnel and funds. Our attorneys are nationally recognized practitioners who have formerly held such titles as assistant secretary of commerce, chief negotiator for textiles at the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative, chief counsel to the Senate Minority Leader, staff member for the House Rules and Agriculture Committees, and counsel at the Commerce Department and International Trade Commission. We are also well-known instructors and speakers in our field.

We are business-minded attorneys who team closely with clients to map out cost-effective strategies that meet their needs and business goals. Our various strengths allow us to formulate and execute creative and successful strategies often based on a cross-disciplinary approach, for example, combining regulatory and legislative action.

Practice Leaders

A 2018 Law360 International Trade Practice Group of the Year

International trade was the big news story of 2018. We were all in, assisting companies on everything from tariffs to export controls and dumping duties to foreign investment in the U.S. Our role in a number of high-profile matters, significant achievements and general excellence garnered selection as a 2018 Law360 Practice Group of the Year.
